

<http://vietcatholic.net/News/Html/76159.htm>

The United States Commission on International Religious Freedom has repeatedly asked the US president and State Department to redesignate Vietnam as a country of particular concern in recognition of its egregious violations of religious freedom, but both the Bush and Obama administrations have chosen not to follow the commission's recommendations. The nation had been designated a country of particular concern until 2006.